Lifelines: A Suicide Prevention Program

This comprehensive suicide prevention program is a whole-school program. Lifelines educates students on the facts about suicide and students' role in suicide prevention. It provides information on where to find suicide prevention resources in the school and community. Training materials are included for faculty and staff that provide accurate and practical information on identifying and referring students who might be at risk for suicide. This suicide prevention program also includes a presentation for parents that answers questions about youth suicide and prevention, and it involves them in the school's suicide prevention activities.

Designed for implementation in middle schools and high schools, it targets the whole school community by providing suicide awareness resources for administrators, faculty and staff, parents, and students. It fits easily into health class programming and lesson plans. Components include the facilitator guide, training information for faculty, staff, and parents, administrative materials, a CD-ROM of reproducible materials, and videos that depict scenarios of student response to a suicidal peer, as well as an actual response by students who participated in Lifelines.

Lifelines Postvention: Responding to Suicide and Other Traumatic Death

The American Association of Suicidology defines suicide postvention as "the provision of crisis intervention, support and assistance for those affected by a completed suicide." Survivors of a completed suicide often include everyone in a school community, including classmates, friends, teachers, and family members.

Lifelines Postvention: Responding to Suicide and Other Traumatic Death is a comprehensive, whole-school best-practices manual specifically designed for middle and high school communities. This unique program educates everyone in the school community on how to successfully address and respond to not only suicide, but any type of traumatic death that profoundly affects the school population.

With in-depth references and detailed plans, this resource outlines a response strategy that reflects the challenges schools face in dealing with a death within the school community. Also included are references and support materials that allow school leaders to recognize and reduce the risk of suicide contagion (or "copycat") behavior within the school.

Although the research and outcomes are based on school-wide implementation, Lifelines: A Suicide Prevention Program and Lifelines Postvention: Responding to Suicide and Other Traumatic Death can be a successful components to any community-based program, such as Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Boys and Girls Clubs of America.

NEW! Lifelines Intervention: Helping Students at Risk for Suicide

This is the newest installment in Hazelden's comprehensive suicide awareness and responsiveness program. Lifelines Intervention provides information on how to be prepared to address and respond to threats or signs of suicide and intervene – before it's too late.

Lifelines Intervention also provides clear guidance on how best to involve parents and guardians as partners and explains how to gather collateral information about a student's risk for suicide and address specific topics. Other topics addressed include the challenges presented by bullied students, members of sexual minorities, and students in gifted special education classes.

About Lifelines Intervention:

- Specifically designed for middle and high school students
- Builds on the foundation of the competent and compassionate school community
- Provides information on how to prepare and interview a student at-risk for suicide
- Provides clear guidance on how best to involve parents and guardians as partners in an intervention with an at-risk teen
